
Buchholz, Lester get charity wines

Posted by Peter Abraham, Globe Staff

March 7, 2011 08:36 AM

By Peter Abraham, Globe Staff

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Clay Buchholz and Jon Lester have joined with Longball Cellars to put their names on wine that will be sold for charity.

Buchholz's ChardonClay, a chardonnay, benefits the Jimmy Fund. Lester has CabernAce, a cabernet that benefits Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center.

The players will not profit as 100 percent of the proceeds will go to their charities.

The 2011 wines are produced by the Selby Winery located in Healdsburg, Calif., and are expected to retail for about $14 a bottle. They will be available beginning in May. For wine connoisseurs and Sox fans out of region, wines can be purchased online at www.charitywines.com.
